Annual National Meeting

The Rossica National Meeting was held at the APS show in Cleveland OH 27-29 August 1999. This national level show gave members of the society an excellent opportunity to look for key items for their collection and meet fellow members and collectors. There was a lot of Russian material in the dealers area. As has been the trend, the better items were very expensive and hard to find. Modern material was a lot more common and reasonably priced. Mid range ($25-50 range) items were noticeably lacking. Yet there were bargains to be found. Nearly everyone was able to find one or two items where expert knowledge paid off. The society manned a booth near the entrance of the show and had a steady trickle of collectors interested in Russian philately.

The social gatherings were a lot of fun. Nearly every night, members got together after the show for dinner and spirited discussions. For those that were there, it was great seeing you all again.

Several articles in this bulletin feature the events that happened at this show including the Rossica Board meeting (page 2), exhibiting results (page 4), and a seminar by one of our own, Al Kugel (page 4).

New Constitution Proposed

In last month’s Journal, members were given a copy of the new Rossica Constitution. Please provide your comments to provide them to Gary Combs no later than 2 weeks after you receive this bulletin. Remember, this is your society and your opinion counts! For discussion on the Constitution, see the minutes of the board meeting on page 2.

Officer Elections

The opening of Nominations for the 2000-2002 Rossica Society Officers will be taking place early next year. Now is the time to start thinking about serving your society. If you are interested in running for office, contact Gary Combs or any other current officer and they will insure your are contacted by the election committee.

Notice

Member Alex Sadovnikov is suspended for one year for selling unauthorized copies of copyright material. Until he meets the terms spelled out in official correspondence, he is not to participate in any official functions related to Rossica.

Mid-West Chapter

The Midwest Chapter of Rossica seems to have gone inactive. Before action was taken to delete this chapter, Ged Seiflow volunteered to attempt to revive it. If you are a member living in this area and are interested in continuing this chapter by meeting at one or two of the local shows a year, please contact Ged at 1249 St. Claire Pl. Schumburg, IL 60173 or by email at .seiflow@bigfoot.com.
Minutes of the Rossica Board Meeting
28 August 1999

Gary Combs called the annual board breakfast meeting to order with the following officers in attendance:

Dave Skipton
Ged Seiflow
Raymond Pietruszka
George Werbizky

The following items were discussed:

Mr. Combs reported that the current sales of the CD-ROM version of the Moscow Study have broken even in cost. Several members have inquired about printed versions of this study and raised concerns that this work would not be available in print. The society's position on Publications is that Rossica is committed to providing paper-based publications for the indefinite future. Our electronic publications are to expand our availability base, not limit it. Paper copies of the Moscow Post Marks will be available in the future at a cost to be determined. He also stated that works on Mute Cancellations and Propaganda Cards were nearing completion and would soon be available in both printed and CD-ROM versions.

Part of the strength of our Society is the publications it produces. These publications cost a great deal of money to publish and distribute. In the past, publications have had to be produced serially, i.e., each publication had to pay for itself and restore the publication fund before the next item could be produced.

The board next addressed a proposal by George Shalimoff to increase the annual dues to $40.00. Since all costs have gone up since the last dues increase especially in printing and postage cost, George proposed the increase in dues. The board felt that this was too high. It was then proposed that dues be raised $25 to help fund future publications and compensate for the higher distribution costs. The officers approved the motion to raise the dues to $25 a year effective next year (2000). To make this more manageable to the members, the dues structure will be $20 if paid before December 31 and $25 if paid afterwards.

It was voted to present the proposed Constitution to the membership for a vote. The new constitution will be sent out to the membership with the October journal and voted on before the next general meeting. All proposed changes were approved except for two.

The proposal that the layout and design of the Journal be mandated in the Constitution. The officers voted this down. The officers did not believe that this should be fixed in the Constitution. It was determined that the Journal Editor would use the traditional cover design for future journals.

The second item was a proposal for a junior membership. In order to encourage the pursuit of Russian philately, the society needs to reach out to young stamp collectors by offering them a discounted junior membership. In the history of Rossica, there has only been one junior member. Also it is not Rossica's role to bring young people into philately, but to promote the study of Russian philately. As such, our potential membership base is not in the junior collectors but the more advanced collectors. This proposal was defeated but it was requested the President survey the membership for the need of a mentor program to provide collectors new to Russian philately a helping hand and support. Let us know.

Also discussed was the plan to follow if Rossica were to stop functioning. Under the current Constitution, if Rossica stops publishing the Journal, it would cease as an organization after three years. At that time, the officers would be required by US law to turn over the remaining assets to another non-profit organization. Under the current plan, it is the American Philatelic Society. The big issue with this is the Library. The officers felt that this is the most valuable asset that the society has to offer as it contains a large number of source documents that are unavailable anywhere else outside of Russia. Under this plan, the library would then go to the APRL. There was concern by the officers that this would result in the loss of some of the rarer Russian language items since the APRL would have no use for these. No action was taken to change this clause, but (Continued on Page 10)
New Members

In order to better serve our members, the new membership listing has been moved from the Journal to the Bulletin. The Bulletin, as the society’s news source, is a better document to publish this listing. The Journal will use its space for articles.

Collecting and Exhibiting Postal History
by Al Kugel

At the APS STAMPSHOW in Cleveland this year, one of our own, Al Kugel, gave the exhibiting/judging seminar on Postal History. As one of the top exhibitors of Russian material, Al has a lot to say that can help us all increase the enjoyment we derive from collecting. The following is the editor’s recollection of what Al had to say about collecting and exhibiting postal history.

Why does Al collect and exhibit postal history? Because it’s Fun! He has been collecting for 50 years but exhibiting for only 7 years. There’s a big difference between collecting and exhibiting. Exhibiting is thinking out of the box; it’s taking your collection and telling a story with it. So why exhibit? It gives you a change to express your creativity. In exhibiting postal history, you have to tell a story about the mail as expressed in postal markings, rates, or routes. It’s a wonderful opportunity to educate people. It’s an opportunity for increased fellowship, getting together with collectors with similar interests, meeting new people, and perhaps trade information and items.

Like with any exhibit, your first decision is to pick a topic. If you are planning to exhibit at a national show, the topic must be able to support 48-160 pages. At national shows, exhibits can be a minimum 4 frame (48 pages) to a maximum of 10 frames (160 pages). Does the story you want to present have enough material available? You also have to consider the other extreme—is the topic so broad that it can’t be adequately presented in 160 pages of material? There are two types of approaches that Al used in his exhibits: horizontal, (a narrow time span) and vertical, an in-depth look at a location or a series. Your approach depends on the topic you have selected.

As with any exhibit, do your research. Study the why of the topic and present this in your exhibit. You will learn a considerable amount about your topic this way. Exhibiting is an opportunity to share your knowledge with other people. You don’t have to wait until you have everything to win the grand award.

Congratulations one and all! My apologies to anyone I ve missed. Thanks to George Werbizky for the IBRA ’99 Palmares. Except for the listing I get from George, I m dependent on Linn s for my listings. Linn s is slow in listing shows and do not list a lot of the overseas exhibitors. So PLEASE send me palmares of any show you attend or exhibit, or where a Rossica member exhibited. Thanks! ED.

Rossica Has a New Site

The society has a new web site located at www.rossica.org. That’s right, we bought our own domain name and address. The new site is maintained by Jeff Radcliffe and doing a fine job. Check out the site, and, while you are at it, fill out his survey and see what improvements are planned.

Russian Album Pages Available on the Net

Need a stamp album pages for your Russian Collection? What to get them cheap? Own a computer with Internet access or someone that does? Then here’s a real deal for you.

Bill Steiner has a web site (stampalbums.com) where he offers shareware stamp album pages. In the past year, he has added Russia from 1858-1998 to his list. He asks for $5.00 to support his efforts, in return, you can get a complete set of pages in Scott order for the cost of the paper. This is real, I use it myself for some of my collections. The pages are based on the Scotts national series but with the plain border. They’re clean and sharp with places for all of the Scotts recognized stamps with boxes sized for mounts. They are designed to be printed on 8.5 x 11 paper that fits US style document protectors. They will also print out on A4 paper but I haven’t tried that. Another benefit is that he offers a downloadable blank page for those items that are not listed in Scott’s. You need the Adobe reader to down load the pages but that’s free too. As of 1 November, he had pages for the following countries:

- Russia 1958-1998
- Far Eastern Republic
- Armenia 1992-98
- Georgia 1918-1923
- German Territories WW1 and II
- Lithuania 1918-1940 and 1990-1998
- Western Ukraine
- Poland 1918-1998
- Central Lithuania

Ukraine 1918-1998
If you don’t have Internet access, a CD-ROM of the pages is also available through a third party. You can even buy the pages printed. For information check out the site at www.stampalbums.com.

The Russian Arctic. History and Philately of Russia’s Far North. By Ackerman, G.A. 1999. 132 pages with over 200 figures. Published by the author, 629 Sanbridge Circle E, Worthington, OH 43085. Price $40 US currency only, includes handling and mailing.

The Arctic. Perhaps no other region has piqued the imagination as has the Arctic and the heroic ventures of the men who sought to conquer the Pole, the surrounding frozen seas and the inhospitable northern land. Nearly one-third of the Arctic region is under Russian sovereignty and no other country has made the commitment to the Far North that Russia has made over the centuries. This is the story of Russia’s ventures into the unknown and the gradual economic development of its northern territory.

This monograph is written from an historical perspective and describes the exploration, exploits and development of Russia’s little known Far North and polar region. The text is complimented with an array of related Russian/Soviet stamps and covers. The following chapter listing provides an overview of the contents and organization of the monograph: The Far North and Its Inhabitants, In the Beginning, The Exploration Eastward, The Latter Half of the 19th Century, The End of the 19th and the Early 20th Century, Developments in the Far North under the Soviets 1920-1940, Exploits to the Pole and the Drift Station Program, The Far North during the Great Patriotic War and Latter Half of the 20th Century 1940-2000, Polar Philately.

Exhibiting Postal History

You can start out at a regional show, and build the exhibit up over time.

So, you have a topic, an approach, now how do you get it together? Al starts out with a stock book to layout the material on the page before writing it up. This gives you the opportunity to move it around and get a balanced page. Strive for two covers per page. You never have enough room for everything you want to show, so don’t waste space. Use enough text to explain the item’s place in the story. But be brief, a lot of writing distracts from the material and does not help you with the judges. Pay attention to the appearance of the page. Keep it clean with a minimum of distractions so the eye focuses on the material. Al doesn’t use borders on his pages, they don’t add anything to the story, and can distract the viewer.

Next, organize the pages in a frame layout. Al lays them out on the floor. You can use a table or even build a work frame to hold the sixteen pages. Layout the pages for the best viewing of the material placing your better items at eye level. The frame needs to be balanced so the story stays together. Look out for repetition of page layout in each frame. You don’t want all of your pages having the same layout. This could bore the viewer and hide the information you want to present. For oversize covers, use a double size board folded in middle and taped on the back (using archival tape, of course).

Make use of the Judges Handbook and try to understand what they are looking for. Remember; you can do whatever you want, but if you want to win you have to follow the rules. Keep changing the exhibit. Don’t let it get cold or the judges will stop looking at it and will miss things. Continuing to improve the presentation and the material will lead you to the grand award.

So, now you have an exhibit and are ready to show it off. There are still two things you need to work on: a title page and a synopsis. Do your title page last so that you can capture the true feel of you exhibit. Remember, the title page tells the viewer what the story of the exhibit is and how you are going to present it. Mention any limitations you’ve placed on the story. For the general viewer, this is the only information they will have before starting to look at your exhibit, so make it count. For the judges, you need to do a synopsis. In a synopsis, you need to discuss the material you are presenting, what is important, the approach, the difficulty of acquisition and the like. The synopsis makes life easier on the judge. It should give him the information he/she needs to become familiar with your exhibit and topic. Include references and relevant information that will help them evaluate your exhibit.

O.K., so you’ve got the exhibit on the show circuit and you’re actively trying to improve it. Now what? Follow up your exhibit with an article. This will improve the judges’ understanding and show your knowledge of the subject and help educate the next generation of collectors. Submit a copy of the exhibit to APRL (and Rossica) to preserve the knowledge you’ve gained. Finally, consider becoming a judge, giving something back to the hobby and making your expertise available to all.

EDITORIAL

Where have all the Russian exhibitors gone?

I have a question for the society’s membership. Why aren’t you exhibiting? As is evident from the listing on page 7, only a few members exhibit. But why? We have wonderful collections, a fascinating field and so much to tell. I can remember when there were a lot more people showing their material. So what happened? Did you get bored? Did it get too expensive? Showed what you had, got the gold, and that was it? Did you show it and get frustrated with the level of award? Or did life just get too busy?

The reason I ask is that for a specialized society, a very low percentage of our members are exhibiting. I believe that at least 25 members should be showing their stuff, yet only about 10 members are doing so. Now I’m only talking about those members (Continued on page 10)
Rossica Board Meeting

all agreed to consider it further and look for a different organization to receive the library.

The requirement for officers to be located in the United States was discussed and was left as it stands. It was felt that while Rossica is an international institution, it's based in the United States and has a significant American membership.

The officers approved a proposal to waive dues payments for elected officers and the editors of the Journal and Bulletin. These people perform a number of functions without compensation and to recognize these efforts, they should not have to pay dues.

A request by the APRL for a copy of our subject index for incorporation into their index was discussed. If this were done, it would increase the availability of the information in the Rossica library and possibly increase interest in the society. The downside is the lost effort to create the index; which has over 10,000 entries. Also, there was concern that this could lead to the library being accessed by non-members as well as increasing the librarian's workload. This was voted down.

The officers were also briefed on the topics for the general membership meeting, scheduled for that afternoon. During this meeting, the society's entrance into cyberspace, communications, the status of the various chapters, the new constitution, and publications plans would be discussed. [ED. The general meeting minutes were presented in the October Journal.]

The final item discussed was the continuing need for the Society members to communicate among themselves. Communications is a two-way street. Members need to read the official notices of the Society and officers need to respond to data calls by the president. If everyone listened at least as much as they spoke, most of the members would understand the Society better.

This concluded the board's discussions and the meeting was adjourned.

in the United States, I simply don't have any information about our overseas members, though I would like to hear from them. Why 25? We are 400 strong, discounting dealers and the overseas members leave us about 250. 10% of that group should be exhibiting based on similar numbers in the APS. So please communicate your feelings. Maybe there is something the officers of the Society should be doing to help promote exhibiting?

Please write and let me know. I'll compile the results and take it from there. Thanks, the Editor.
